INTRODUCTION

The Urantia Book Papers present revelations in the history of planet Earth - Urantia, which were in the heavenly records and were provided to us, human beings, in the early twentieth century in the Chicago City. [1]

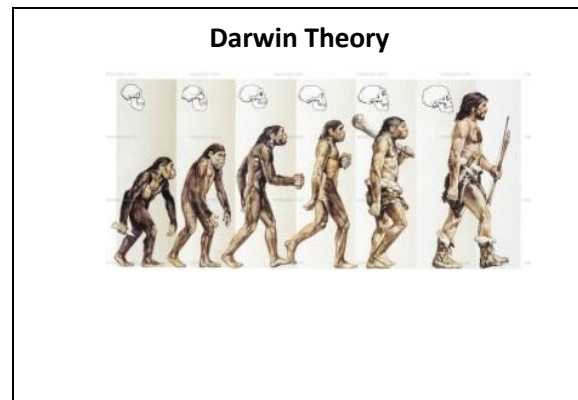

In the nineteenth century and until the mid-twentieth century, our science adjudged the Asian continent as the birthplace of the first humans. This decision was correct. But after the 50s years of 20th century, official science changed its mind and now believes that the first human species were born and evolved in Africa over two million years ago. This theory appeared as a result of new fossils found in Africa by French paleontologists who discovered carved tools whose age was determined by the method of radioactive decay.

The new theory assumes that Hominid species were born and developed in Africa, of which Homo Ergaster came to colonize Asia and Europe, Homo Ancestor for the Iberian Peninsula, and finally Homo Sapiens got to dominate the world. This theory raises many controversies in the scientific world. Radioactive methods to determine the age of fossils from millions of years of existence are unreliable. [2]

Modern scientists have a difficult task to distinguish pre-human animal skulls from human skulls. Science has no reference point to distinguish between animal and human, and it is assumed that pre-human monkeys became human gradually with each generation in the evolutionary process.

Actually it was not like that. The Papers published as " The Urantia Book " teach that a million years ago in Asia , a pair of animals , higher primates , human twins were born , man and woman, who were the parents of all mankind . [3]

Long before the appearance of the first human being there had been different class of mammal apes, but these were not pre-human apes, some of which still survive. A little more than a million years ago were only three kinds of animals - apes who were direct ancestors of humans. The first human - twins were born from an animal couple in South Asia. The problem of the first humans on earth was that the best tribes have deteriorated progressively until its extinction due to the madness of allowing free breeding with their animal cousins . The first tribes, descendants of the first human pair of twins, were more civilized than their later descendants.

Anthropologists have not agreed with the existence of human races. Some scientists make racial classifications by the color of the skin, hair quality, skull shape or geographical birthplaces. Research geneticists have concluded that humans biologically are not classified by race, because the difference in genes is negligible. Despite this view, many scientists specialized in this area ensure the existence of the human race as biological.

The Urantia Book teaches us that the planet Earth had nine primary races of humans, and when blended together, nearly 500,000 years ago, produced the diversity of modern humans.

This article is dedicated to the history and description of the human races of our planet, its wide blend for thousands of years until the onset of the 21st century human civilization.

1. ANIMALS PRE-HUMAN

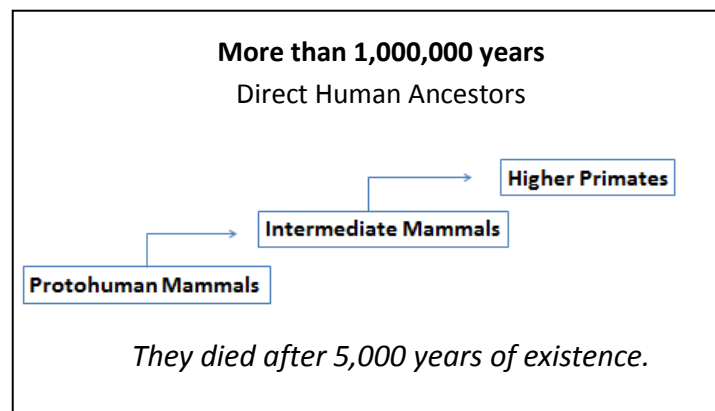

More than a million years ago, three successive mutations of mammalian animals that were the direct ancestors of the human race appeared in Asia.

Several million years ago, North American Lemurs tribes migrated by the Bering land bridge and moved along the Asian coast and finally reached the salubrious region between the Mediterranean Sea, which was expanded by this time, and the Northwest mountains of the Indian peninsula. In these lands of western India, a Persian peninsula, American lemurs joined with other favorable simian races, thus establishing the animal offspring of the future human race.

These primitive lemurs were not directly related to the existing tribes of gibbons, gorillas and other monkeys living in Europe, Asia, and North Africa, and whose progeny has survived to this day. American Lemurs were not direct relatives of modern lemurs. Dominant genetic factors of these early lemurs were favorable for the subsequent appearance of three successive species of mammals, which were direct ancestors of humans.

A little over a million years, thanks to a gene mutation, appeared "suddenly" dawn mammals, direct descendants of American lemurs. These animals were very creative; they were about one meter tall and carnivores, unlike the existing simian tribes.

Among these dawn mammals there was a couple who gave birth to twins, a male and a female, that were bigger than their parents , had little hair, their arms were shorter than their legs , and their brains were bigger than their parents’.

These siblings were mated and soon after they had twenty children similar to them, all overlooking the dawn mammal species. This group of animals was evolving and as a result a new species of animals appeared – the Mid Mammals.

A couple of this group of Mid advanced mammals became the parents of twins, who were the most interesting animals ever been born on earth. The twins were a new species of Higher Primate animals; they were the last vital step in the evolution of pre-human animals.

For twenty thousand years, the chain of three animal species has been developed: dawn mammals, the Primates Mid and Higher Mammals, which were the direct ancestors of the human race. All this evolution was performed by the method of gene mutation applied by the Life Carriers, which are special celestial beings, those who sow life in the material planets.

The tribes of the higher primates were the last link in the evolution of pre-human animals, but in less than five thousand years there was not a single animal in this class. Mid-mammals were also ancestors of the simian tribes of modern times.

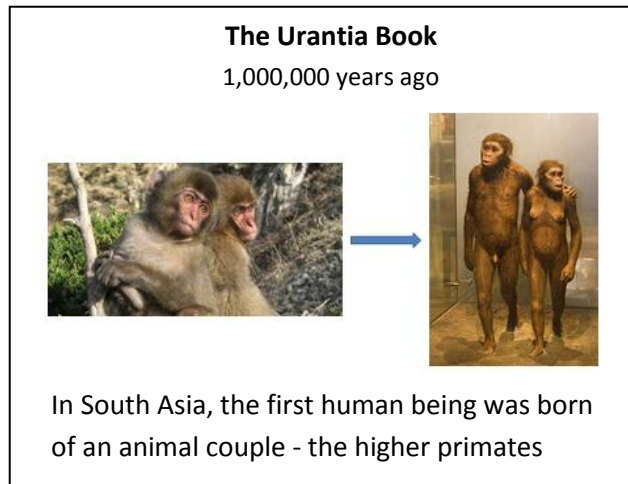

Humans and apes, modern apes, descended from the same tribe of Mid-mammals, but not from the same parents. The direct ancestors of humans, higher primates, were descendants of a senior couple, the most selective of Mid-mammals and modern apes evolved from a couple of the most backward tribe. The Higher Primates were some splendid animals; its skeleton was very similar to those of primitive human races. [5]

2. Andonic RACE

Nearly 1,000,000 years ago, actually 993,500 years ago (2015), in Southwest Asia, a couple of primates smarter than the whole tribe gave birth to twins, the First Human, male and female, who were progenitors of the entire human species of animal origin.

These twins were called Andon and Fonta and they were the parents of the Andonic race. In many respects, Andon and Fonta were the most remarkable pair of human beings, superior to most of their immediate descendants.

Human twins felt the differences with their parents and all the tribe of primates. Actually they had human emotions such as gratitude, awe, humility, fear, shame, love, hate, and revenge. But definitely they were recognized as human beings by the existence of their will.

At nine years old, Andon and Fonta took an important decision: to leave their tribe and planned to escape northward. This act of free will meant their human minds were already responding to the call of the Seven Adjutant Mind Spirits.

The Life Carrier resident of our planet writes: "We, the Life Carriers on Urantia, had passed through the long vigil of watchful waiting since the day we first planted the life plasm in the planetary waters, and naturally the appearance of the first really intelligent and volitional beings brought to us great joy and supreme satisfaction" [6]

The first human couple developed verbal conversation rapidly and communicated each other with words. Andon discovered accidentally that by hitting stones sparks came out and he tried to light the fire for two months until he finally succeeded, when the spark fell to a dry nest. The twins were so surprised to see the fire burning that they almost left it off. Later the parents of all mankind went in search of firewood for the first time.

The first son of Andon and Fonta was called Sontad and was the first creature on the planet that was wrapped in protective covers after his birth. Andon and Fonta had 19 children, 50 grandchildren, and 6 great-grandchildren, and they died at age 42 in an earthquake. Primitive men, the Andonites, had black eyes and dark skin because they contain the natural pigment melanin. [7]

The first Andonites lived together about 500 years in the mountainous part of Asia; they used animal skins for warmth, had primitive language, were a magnificent tribe, and took care of their children. After 700 years of existence of human beings on Earth, they formed many clans which constantly fought each other and lost the best representatives of the race.

The Andonites began moving north and west, but did not enter Africa. The first natives of planet Earth - Urantia - preferred to live along rivers, near the river Somme, in France, for tens of thousands of years. Before the third glacial age reached Europe, 930,000 years ago, the Andonic tribes settled back over a thousand separate settlements along the rivers of Europe that flowed into the waters of the North Sea, which at this time were lukewarm. These Andon tribes tended to mingle with apelike creatures that lived in the southern forests; this debilitated the genes of the early humans as a race. [8]

900,000 years ago, large numbers of inferior mongrel tribes got to England from southern France, through the bridge connecting the mainland to the British island. Later, more prolific people appeared in Europe, called Foxhall; they were the ancient ancestors of the Eskimos. Thousands of years ago, near the Caspian Sea there were some advanced people, called Oban, who developed the first concepts of religion and their spiritual leader, Onagar, sent out the first missionaries to neighboring villages.

Other advanced people lived in the Alps and in the Mediterranean region, called the Heidelberg race. Their first fossils were discovered in Germany in the province of Heidelberg in 1907. [9]

900,000 years ago, there was a land path from the British Island to Australia and Tasmania. At this time, Andonites migrated far to the east, went to the island of Java and beyond and moved to Australia and Tasmania.

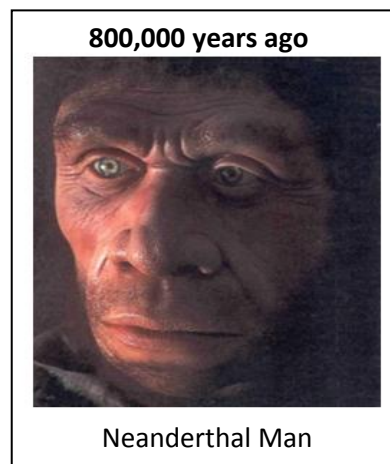

In 1891, paleontologists found the remains of these Andonites and called them Java man or Pithecanthropus. [10]

Besides advanced people, such as Foxhall, Heidelberg in Europe and Oban people in Asia, there was another cultural center in the highlands near the northwest India, the Badonan tribes, the only people who never practiced human sacrifice. The Badonan people concentrated the best genetic inheritance of Andon and Fonta, but very backward mixed tribes lived around them.

850,000 years ago, the superior Badonan tribes began a war against their inferior and animalistic neighbors, and in less than one thousand years of war they wiped out almost all the inferior tribes.

Some of the descendants of the Badonan people mixed with lower strains, and thus gave rise to a new race, the Neanderthals, who ruled the world for almost five hundred thousand years, from 800,000 to 300,000 BC or so.

Neanderthal men were excellent hunters and spread throughout Europe, Asia, China, and northern Africa. But for 300,000 years Neanderthal men made little progress, constantly degenerating compared to other superior Andonic race people. [11]

Since 1,000,000 to 500,000 years ago on planet Earth only one human race lived on Urantia, the animal origin Andonic race. The Andonites moved across the earth at that time - Europe, Asia, Australia, Tasmania, northern Africa, Greenland, but they did not go to America. There were different tribes, most of them far behind, these tribes preferred to live in tropical forests. Man has always declined in forests; human evolution has made progress only in open fields and northern latitudes. Cold and hunger provoke action, invention, and development.

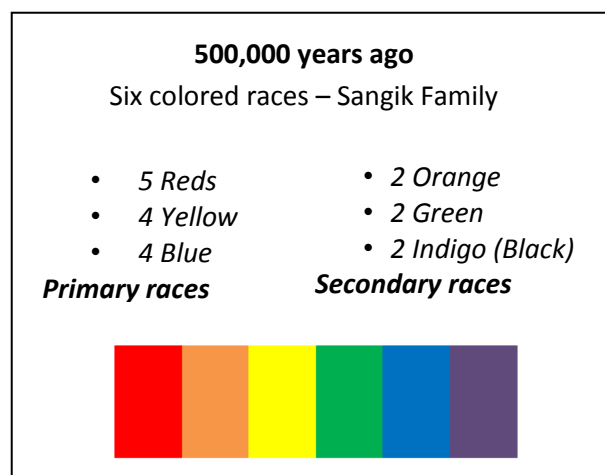

The subsequent appearance of the six colored races gave new impetus to the evolution of human beings on the planet.

3. THE SIX COLORED RACES

500,000 years ago in the northwestern highlands of India, there where Afghanistan is now about a hundred families of the more progressive tribes of Badonan people who survived the great racial war. These human creatures were the most intelligent and advanced of all the descendants of Andon and Fonta who lived in this era.

"Suddenly" in a single family of this tribe Badonan , extremely intelligent children were born, more intelligent than their peers.

A total of 19 children were born with one special feature - their skin showed a unique trend: it turned to different colors upon exposure to sunlight. Among these 19 children were five red, two orange, four yellow, two green, four blue, and two indigo (black).

This was the Sangik family, the ancestors of the six colored races. When these young Sangiks mated with other young people in the tribe, their offspring were born with the same color of the skin as their Sangik parent. This way the six colored races on planet Earth – Urantia were formed. Out of the six colored races, there are the three primary ones: red, yellow, and blue, and the other three are secondary: orange, green and indigo (black).

For nearly one hundred thousand years, these Sangik people blended and spread all over India; since the fifth glacial age began moving toward southern Europe and Asia, this did not allow the migration to the north. Nor they could migrate to Africa because the Mediterranean Sea occupied the Arabian Peninsula at that time.

300,000 years ago, India had the most cosmopolitan population on Earth, but unfortunately the blend contained the highest percentage of secondary races - orange, green, and indigo. These secondary races always looked for nice lands in the south of the continent. The upper - primary races, the red, yellow, and blue, preferred not to live in the tropics, where life was easy and comfortable, and when the fifth glacial retreated, about 300,000 years ago, primary Sangik races began to migrate to the north and east.

The first colored races were subjected to a very difficult test, because of the rigors and hardships of the fifth glacial period that lasted between 550,000-300,000 years ago or so.

3.1 The red race. Red men were extraordinary, in many ways superior to Andon and Fonta. They were extremely intelligent and the first ones to develop a tribal civilization and tribal government.

They were monogamous, even their mixed descendants seldom practiced polygamy. They invented the bow and arrow; however, unfortunately they inherited the tendency to fight among themselves, and this weakened them considerably. [12]

The red men were the first ones to abandon their homeland and 300,000 years ago they began to migrate eastward, passing through the lands that were vacated by the fifth glacial ice, which moved northward. The tribes of yellow men followed red men. These two races fought each other for nearly 200,000 years, until the yellow man drove the red men off East Asia.

85,000 years ago, the comparatively pure remnants of the red race, driven off by the yellow man, crossed the Bering land isthmus and got to America. Shortly after, the narrow Bering land sank so the red men never returned to Asia. But throughout Siberia, China, India, Asia, and Europe they left their stock blended with the other colored races.

The red men took the Dalamatia teachings to America, but soon they lost these teachings and there was a great decline in their intellectual and spiritual culture. Soon they started fighting among them so violently that this relatively pure race was in danger of extinction. [12]

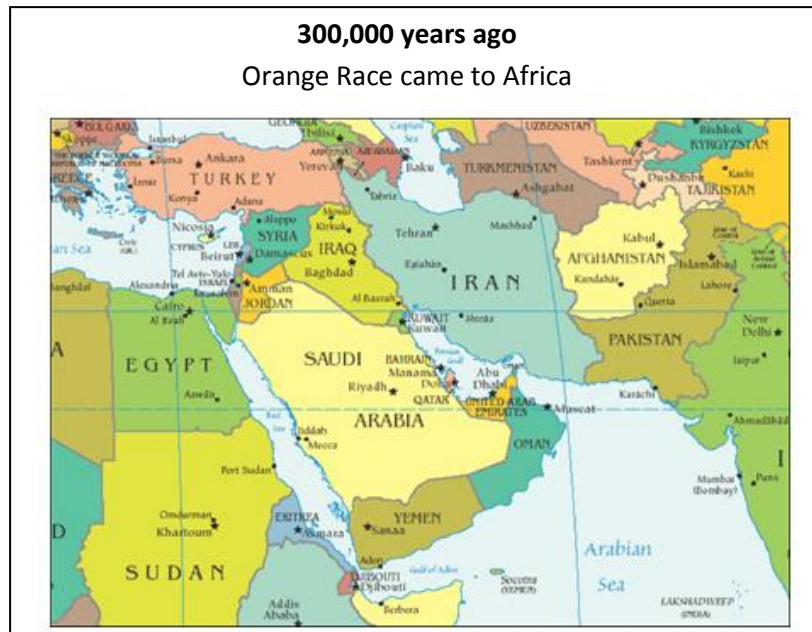

But 65,000 years ago, a red race spiritual leader called Onamonalonton appeared, and he managed to stop the war and established a temporary peace. Onamonalonton built a Native American cultural center in California and revived the red man worship to the "Great Spirit."

This center, the oldest in America, disappeared about 35,000 years ago, but many of their descendants have come down to modern times as Blackfoot Indians.

After Onamonalonton's death, wars were resumed and their teachings became vague traditions. During these tribal struggles, the most intelligent strains perished, otherwise a great civilization could have emerged in America. The American red man, known as "Red Indian", did not contact with other races except with the Eskimo, until being discovered by the white man who killed him. [12, 13]

3.2 The orange race. The orange men were not a progressive people, but their outstanding feature was their urge to build something. Approximately 300,000 years ago, orange men began to migrate to the west along the coast of the Arabian Sea, Persian Gulf, through Mesopotamia, Arabian Peninsula and they reached Africa.

About 300,000 years ago, orange people built the Armageddon cultural center in the future Palestine, but soon they lost all its cultural and spiritual achievements.

At first, Egypt was dominated by the orange man, then by the green man. In the lower Nile valley occurred the last great struggle between the orange and the green men that lasted almost one hundred years and at the end there were very few orange people left. The remains of this race were absorbed by green and indigo people who arrived to Africa later. The orange race ceased to exist about one hundred thousand years ago. [14]

3.3 The yellow race. This race was intellectually somewhat inferior to the red man, but collectively they proved themselves superior to all of the Sangik people.

After driving the red man off Asia, the yellow tribes learned to live together in relative peace. They established settled communities and developed a home life based on agriculture in the Asian territory where China is now.

200,000 years ago, they fell gradually into great darkness, but 100,000 years ago there was the rebirth of their nation and a brilliant age. This race has the reputation to be the most peaceful nation in Urantia. The yellow race further received a small legacy of Adamic stock. [14]

3.4 The green race. This race was one of the less able groups of primitive men. The green men left their homelands into three major groups. The tribes moved north were absorbed by yellow and blue races.

The eastern group was amalgamated with the Indian people of those days, and even now you can find people with the characteristics of green man in India.

The third group migrated to Africa, where they destroyed their orange cousins and were subsequently absorbed by the indigo race. The green and orange men carried strains of the giant order and many of them were about eight feet tall. [14]

3.5 The blue race. The blue men were a great people and combined the brain capacity of the red man with the soul and sentiment of the yellow man.

About 300,000 years ago, when the fifth glacial ice began to recede, the blue men together with some other small racial groups began their emigration to the west and north, invading Europe in successive waves.

In southern Europe, blue men blended with Neanderthal men and this weakened them as a race; these new people invaded Europe from the east to England. In the Persian Peninsula the rest of the blue strain had been left, which later amalgamated with different races, mainly yellow race. [15]

3.6 The indigo race (black). Black men were the least progressive of all the colored races. They were the last to migrate from their homelands to Africa. They followed the same path as their orange and green cousins, along the Arabian coast through southern Palestine and then to Egypt, where they finished off the green man by sheer force of numbers. Then they blended with the orange and green remnants, and this made their race improve. Later the pure and mixed indigo tribes seized the whole African continent. [15]

At the end of the migrations of the Sangik races, 70,000 years ago, the world stage was as follows: the green and orange races were gone, the red man held North America, the yellow man eastern Asia, the blue man Europe, and the indigo race went to Africa. India harbored a blend of the secondary Sangik races with the Andonic race. The blended tribes of the red and yellow race occupied the islands of the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Asia.

An amalgamated race of superior potential - mainly red and blue blended with orange - was in the highlands of South America. The purest Andonites lived in the extreme northern regions of Europe and in Iceland, Greenland, and northeastern North America and Alaska. [16]

4. Nodite RACE

From 200,000 to 38,000 years ago

A heavenly being of the Lanonandek order is sent out to each planet where life was planted, as the Planetary Prince who should rule the planet for thousands of years. He comes with a staff of one hundred people whose purpose is to teach humans of animal origin and help them in their evolutionary progress.

Caligastia, our Planetary Prince, arrived on Urantia with his staff of one hundred people about five hundred thousand years ago, which coincided with the appearance of the six colored races. The hundred members of Caligastia staff were ascenders who lived their material lives on different planets like ours and survived, went through seven morontia lives on the mansion worlds and were citizens of Jerusem, the capital of our local system. Planet Jerusem and its satellites are near the Orion constellation and are invisible to our telescopes, because they are not illuminated by any sun, nor they reflect light.

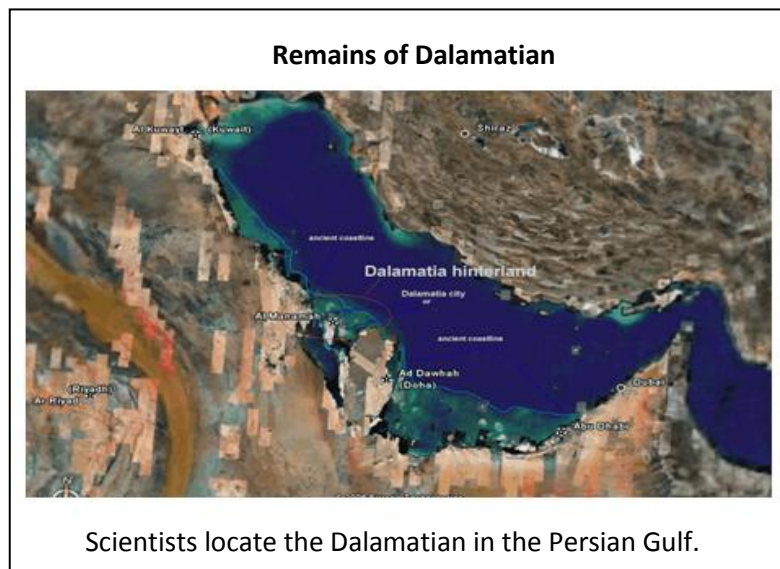

Transport angels brought the souls of those one hundred people in the staff to planet Earth, and Life Carriers built their material bodies. To assemble these bodies, they used the vital plasm, i.e. DNA, of one hundred ANDONITES, natives of planet Earth, specially chosen for this purpose.

Life Carriers are heavenly scientists invisible to us; they have no material bodies and can do many things that our science does not know. These same Carriers sowed life on Earth 550 million years ago and guided its evolution until the emergence of the first human being. Due to the universal rules, Carriers must leave the planet once the first human being is born; after that, there is no permission to manipulate human evolution. Only two or three Life Carriers can stay, who act in special cases with the permission of the universal government.

The technique used by the Life Carriers to build the material bodies of the one hundred staff members and to modify the bodies of the one hundred ANDONITES chosen, allowed these two groups of beings to live for thousands of years because cosmic life energy circulated through their bodies, in addition to blood, which did not allow the material body aging. [17]

The ancient tribes from different parts of our planet have many myths and legends about people who lived thousands of years without dying.

The headquarters of the Planetary Prince, Dalamatia, was the first city in the world and was located in the Persian Gulf region, in the future Mesopotamia.

The Prince was invisible to humans, but his personal staff - 50 men and 50 women - was visible and worked together with the one hundred modified Andonites.

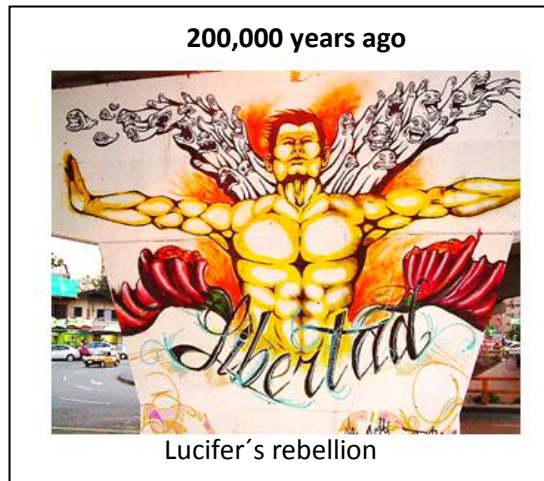

Prince aids had material bodies and therefore could have children, but they were not allowed to procreate. [17]

For 300,000 years, the staff members taught the natives different disciplines in their schools in Dalamatia. The one hundred of Caligastia were material but superhuman beings, ate no meat, did not die and had real knowledge of God and the existence of many celestial beings.

Ten committees were organized and taught the natives about the universe administration, astronomy, and many advanced techniques that now would surprise our scientists. The natives of the planet called them "gods", as consigned in myths and ancient sacred books. [17]

10. Court of racial cooperation	Van

200,000 years ago, their educational mission was interrupted because the Lucifer rebellion began. The Prince of our planet, Caligastia, and sixty members of his staff supported the rebellion, and thus the "war in heaven" began.

The sixty rebels of Caligastia nominated Nod as their leader, who was formerly the head of the commission who taught the trade between tribes. The remaining forty members of the staff, faithful to God, nominated Van as their leader, who had previously directed a committee of tribal coordination and racial cooperation. Some of the one hundred Andonites also supported the rebellion, and some others did not. Amadon was the outstanding human hero who, along with Van, fought against the Lucifer rebellion on Earth. [18]

This devastating calamity profoundly influenced the evolution of humanity and, after several thousands of years, the native people of the planet turned into great darkness.

Soon the sixty rebels supporting Nod realized they had no vital energy previously circulating in their bodies, i.e. they had become mortal just like humans because life energy was taken away from them. Understanding this, the sixty rebels quickly began to procreate with each other and formed a new race, the eighth one, called Nodite, deriving its name from Nod, their chief.

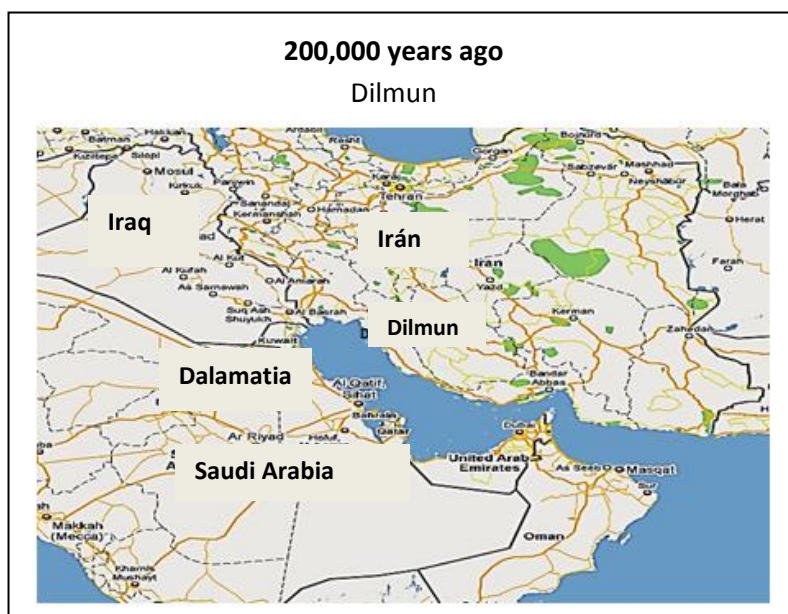

200,000 years ago

Race

Because life energy circulated inside the bodies of the staff members and the one hundred Andonites for 300,000 years, their chromosomes were reorganized and improved. Our scientists know well that X-rays can change the DNA of plants and animals; something similar happened to the chromosomes of these beings.

This is the reason why the children of the Nodites, Vanites, Amadonites, and future generations were far superior beings physically, intellectually and spiritually, compared to the native races of the planet. Plus they had knowledge of different non-terrestrial sciences and technologies which their parents taught them, and this knowledge passed from generation to generation. Nodites kept teaching different sciences and technologies to the early native tribes whenever they migrated to different parts of the planet. [19]

The almost complete destruction of Dalamatia took place 200,000 years ago and was made by the wild tribes. After its submersion in the sea, Nodites were forced to move to the northeast and to build a new city, Dilmun, which was on the other side of the Persian Gulf.

Pure race Nodites were a great race, later in time they blended with the native people of Urantia and improved the races of animal origin in Urantia. [20]

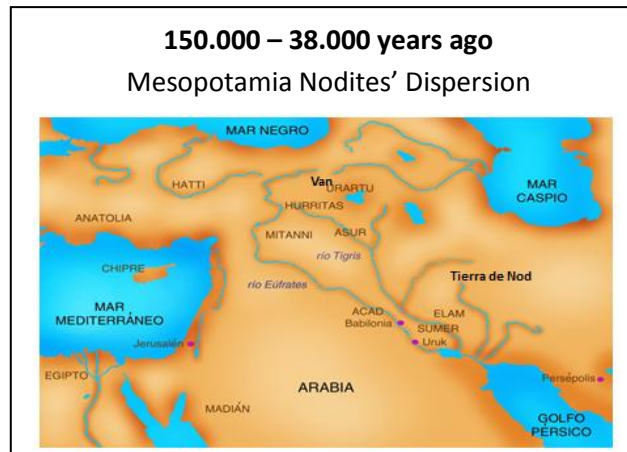

It is written in the Bible: "The Nephilim (Nodites) were in the earth in those days and when these sons of the gods had relations with the daughters of men, their children were the 'bravest past men of renowned' [21]. The ancient people living in different parts of our planet had many legends and myths about Nodites and called them "Children of the Gods" [22]

Approximately 150,000 years ago, after Nod's death, Nodites expanded their domains near the city of Dilmun, mingling with the Andonites and Sangik tribes.

This act weakened their race considerably and Nodite leaders made the decision to build an ostentatious temple to the glorification of their race. This plan was offered by Bablot, a direct descendant of Nod. Thus the story of the Tower of Babel (Bablot) was born. The making of this tower produced many conflicts and wars among the purest Nodites and made them split into four main groups:

1. Western or Syrian Nodites moved to the northwest of Mesopotamia, which blended with the Andonites and later they made a new strain of the Assyrians appear.
2. The eastern or Elamite Nodites migrated eastward from Mesopotamia into Elam (Persia), and there they united with the blended Sangiks tribes, the colored races. The Elamite civilization remained superior to that of the surrounding barbarians. This Nodite settlement in Elam was called "The Land of Nod ". [23]

3. The central or pre-Sumerian Nodites was a small group at the mouth of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers and later blended with the Adamic race to found the Sumerian people. Sumerian pride was their Nodite culture, older than the Adamites one.
4. Northern Nodites were purebred and formed by the descendants of the followers of Van and Amadon, who fought against the Lucifer rebellion 200,000 years ago. Long before the issue of the Tower of Babel, Amadonites and Vanites settled on the banks of Lake Van (Turkey) which bears the name of his chief, around which several villages were formed. These northern Nodites taught the neighboring villages that their laws had been given to Van by the Gods upon Mount Ararat, Turkey.

These four Nodites groups were the most civilized, advanced and educated groups in the world before the arrival of Adam and Eve. [24]

5. VIOLET (Adamic) RACE

37,927 years ago (in 2013)

To each planet where life is planted, a pair of semi-material beings is sent under a name of Adam and Eve, with the aim of improving the existing races. Adam and Eve are biologic uplifters and reach the planet after the Planetary Prince, when the primary genetic potential of biological evolution of human races has run out. According to the universal rules, Adam and Eve must create their direct descendants of many generations of pure Adamic race, to approximately one million people. Then, these direct descendants of Adam and Eve can mate with the native beings of the planet and thus biologically uplift and strengthen human bodies.

Nearly 38,000 years ago came to our Earth -Urantia the biologic uplifters, Adam and Eve, to create the ninth and violet race on this planet. They were more than eight feet tall, had blue eyes, light hair, and light purple radiating bodies. [25]

Eighty years before their arrival, Van and Amadon, with their three thousand helpers, started building the first garden, Eden, on a peninsula of the eastern Mediterranean, which is now underwater.

The biblical account on the creation of the earth which lasted six days is based on the tradition stating that Adam and Eve spent six days learning more about the Garden. Another account on the creation of Eve from Adam's rib is a confused version about transplanting the life plasm from one hundred Andonites to the one hundred staff members of the Planetary Prince, almost 462,000 years before the arrival of Adam and Eve.

The souls of Adam and Eve were brought by seraphic transport from Jerusem to Earth and their bodies were rebuilt in the first Garden by the Life Carriers residing in our planet, with the permission of the universal rulers. [26]

In Eden, Adam and Eve organized educational schools for the native people. They chose the best human specimens and brought them to Eden for their education in different areas and then they returned to their native tribes.

For over a hundred years, the Garden was working quite well, but the cultural progress among natives of the planet was negligible. Adam and Eve were very concerned; the problem was the natives of the planet were unprepared for their teachings due to the previous mission of the Planetary Prince. At this time, there were four generations of the Adamic race of 1,647 direct descendants of violet race living in the garden.

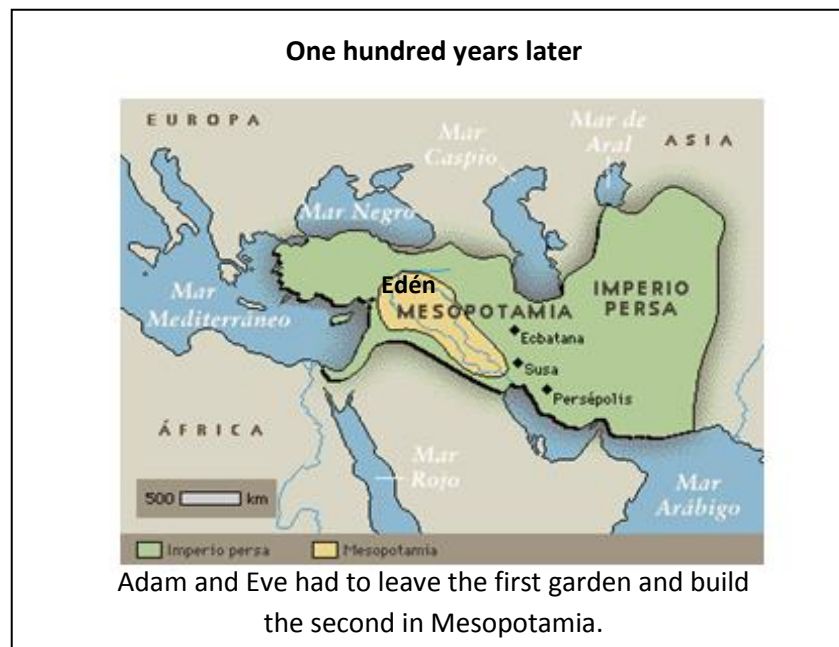

All western Nodite people, Assyrians, started collaborating with Adam and Eve in their work. The leader of the Nodites, Serapatatia , was a very honest and sincere man in everything he proposed. He tried to accelerate human evolution, and said to Eve that if Nodites had a leader with Adamic blood, progress could be achieved faster. Eva finally accepted to bear a child with a bright Nodite called Cano, with the purpose of creating a new generation formed by Nodite and Adamic blood. Thus Cain, the son of Eva and Cano, was born.

This was a big mistake on Eve's part, because according to universal rules, Eva should never betray Adam. All this happened due to Caligastia's evil influence towards Serapatatia, who never suspected he was being manipulated by the fallen Prince. This way, Caligastia, the devil of the planet, succeeded in stopping the Adamic mission on planet Earth.

The next day, when Eve told Adam about what happened, he immediately understood the severity of the crime. Adam loved Eve with supermortal affection and decided to share the fate of Eve, because he could not stand the situation of being alone on the planet. Adam sought out Laotta, the brilliant Nodite in charge of the schools in the West

Garden, and made the same mistake as Eve's. From this relationship Sansa, a beautiful woman with great ability, was born.

From that moment on, a long war began between Adamites, Nodites and half-blood people living near the first garden. Adam and Eve had to leave Eden and found the second garden elsewhere, between the Tigris and Euphrates.

Adam and Eve were deprived of the tree of life, and for this reason the life energy stopped circulating in their bodies and they became mortal. Adam and Eve died after about 500 years of living on the planet. In the second Garden they had Abel and 42 more children. Adam begat other Nodite women who were chosen by Eve, and other 1,570 brilliant and high-capacity men and women were born. [27]

In the second garden, Seth, son of Adam and Eve, held the "Sethite" priesthood, which taught monotheism, medicine, and various sciences to the native people of the planet. This priesthood lasted thousands of years.

The second Eden, which was located in Mesopotamia, was the cradle of civilization for nearly 33,000 years after the death of Adam and Eve. Here and for nearly 10,000 years, pure blood Adamic people lived without blending with other races. From this Asian region, men and women came out and initiated the violet race feats of history and greatly accelerated biological, social, moral, scientific and spiritual progress of the Urantian native men. Mesopotamian civilization fully disappeared by 2,000 BC.

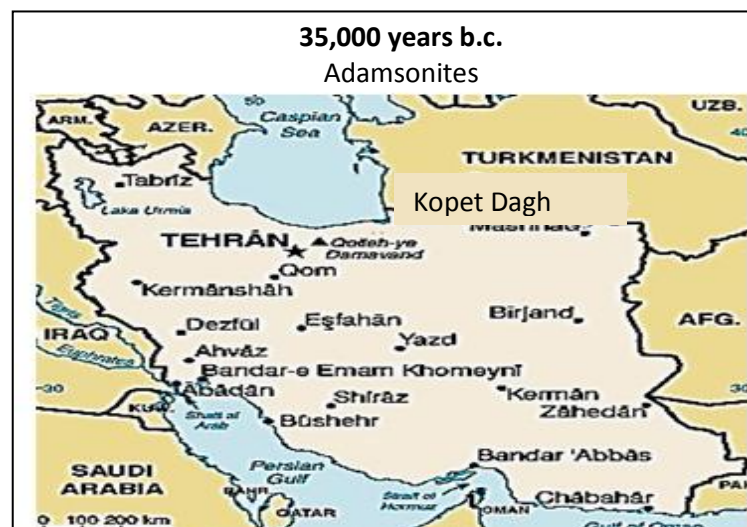

6. ADAMSONITES

35,000 B.C.

Adamson was the eldest son of Adam and Eve, who lived with them in the second garden in Mesopotamia. He was more than 120 years old when he decided to leave for the north. After three years traveling, Adamson, followed by twenty-seven companions, found a Nodite-Vanite village. In this village he discovered a beautiful and wonderful woman called Ratta, direct descendant of a couple of the staff of the Prince.

Adamson and Ratta married and had 67 children. These two were actually superhuman beings and gave origin to new generations of Adamsonite beings, who were the leaders of ancient civilizations for many centuries. Adamson died at 396 years old and during his life made several visits to his parents in the second garden. [28]

The center of the civilization of the Adamsonite violet race was located at the east of the Caspian Sea in Turkestan, near the Kopet Dag mountains.

Turkestan is the ancient name of the territory which now includes several countries: Turkmenistan, Tadjigistan, Uzbekistan, Kyrgyzstan, Kazakhstan and western China.

In this place and in different periods four diverse cultures arose, fostered by four different groups of Adamson's descendants. A group of the Adamsonite violet race migrated to Greece and the islands of the Mediterranean. Another group went to Europe, where they formed a cultural potential which later became the European civilization. [29]

7. RACIAL AND CULTURAL DISTRIBUTION

30,000 YEARS AGO

Although Adam and Eve made a good contribution to the progress of humanity on the planet, thirty thousand years ago the world in general had little education and at this time there were the following centers of civilization:

1. The violet race (Adamites) was in the second Garden, in northern Mesopotamia, between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers.
2. The violet race (Adamsonites), the second center of the violet race was the Adamson headquarters, located at the east of the Caspian Sea near the Kopet Dag mountains. Currently the Kopet Dag mountains are the border between Turkmenistan and Iran. In ancient times the Kara Kum desert, near Kopet Dag, was the fertile land where Adamsonite civilization possibly was.
3. Nodite race (pre-Sumerian), some Nodites also lived in Mesopotamia, but in the south, near the mouth of the rivers, 200,000 years ago there was the cultural center of the Planetary Prince age with its capital, Dalamatia. In later times, Nodites always retained their ancient culture and were very proud of it. [30]

Racial distribution

1. Violet Race - Mesopotamia
2. Adamsonites (Violet) - Turkestan
3. Nodite Race (Pre-Sumerios) - Southern Mesopotamia
4. Andonic Race - Europe, Asia, Britain, Arctic, Iceland, Turkestan, Siberia, Pacific Islands
5. Red Race - North America
6. Yellow Race - East Asia
7. Blue Race - Europe

4. Andonic race, Andonites, the first animal human race, had six large settlements at the north and east of the Adamson headquarters in the territory now belonging to Turkmenistan. Other Andonic tribes were scattered throughout Turkestan and in some areas of Europe and Asia, especially in mountainous regions. Much earlier, the blue race expelled Andonites to Europe and to the north and yellow man led them out of the distant plains of Asia. Andonite aborigines occupied the shores of the North Sea, the Arctic regions; they were in Britain (the Channel did not exist), in Iceland, Greenland, and the islands of the Pacific Ocean. At this time, weather in Iceland, Greenland, and the Arctic was warm.
5. The red race, the red men lived in North America, where they formed many people. In South America some red men mixed with yellow and blue tribes who came to the continent with them. The red men departed from Asia about 50,000 years before the coming of Adam and Eve to the planet and never received Adamic blood.
6. The yellow race, the yellow men were well established and controlled eastern Asia. They had their most advanced settlements near the mountains of Tibet.
7. Blue race, the blue men were scattered throughout Europe, but their best cultural centers were located in the fertile valleys along the Mediterranean Sea and in Western Europe. The blending of the blue man with the Neanderthal man had made their culture to go backwards, but, all of this aside, they were the most energetic, adventurer and explorer of all the native people in the planet.
8. The people of India were formed by the blending of all the native races in the earth, but most of them were green, orange, and indigo (black), secondary races of the Sangik family. At this time, India had a slightly higher culture compared to their neighbors. [31]
9. The people of northern Africa, the superior men of the indigo race (black), blended with green and orange men, had their most progressive settlements in what is now the Sahara desert , but at this time, thirty thousand years ago, these lands were fertile .

Mixed races

1. India – Razas secundarias de Sangik.
2. Norte de África – índigo, verde, anaranjado.
3. Cuenca del Mediterráneo – azul, nodita, adánica mezclados con los pueblos de Sahara.
4. Lago Van (Turquía) – Noditas (Vanitas y Amadonitas).

10. The basin of the Mediterranean, the most blended race outside India occupied what is now the Mediterranean basin. Here blue men mixed with the Sahara people and with some Nodite and Adamic race.

11. The culture of Van, near Lake Van (Turkey), Nodite people who were descendants of Van and Amadon and retained their high culture from old times since one hundred seventy thousand years ago. [32]

Such was the picture of the world, around 30,000 years ago, before the beginning of the big expansions of the violet race. [32]

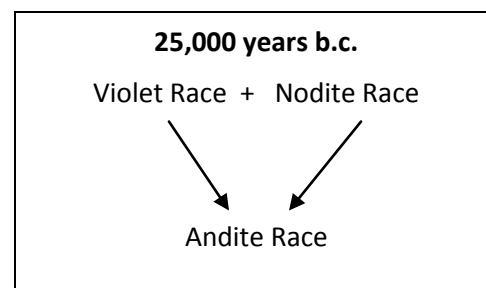

8. ANDITE RACE

25,000-15,000 YEARS B.C.

The massive expansion of the Adamites began about 25,000 years ago, when the people in Mesopotamia, the second Garden, thoroughbred 4,500,000 Adamic men and had already introduced millions of their children in the neighboring villages. [32]

Approximately 25,000 years BC, in regions close to Mesopotamia, first people of the Andite race were formed; they were the blending of the violet race with Nodite pure race.

Early Andites had a much higher percentage of Adamic blood than the modern white races; these Andites had a sixth of violet blood, even the white races in the North have far less blood than the early Andites had.

Later, Nodites and Adamites were found in Turkestan, where they blended together and with the best strains of yellow, blue, and green men, forming another branch of the Andites. These early Turkestan Andites were not Aryans; they were a pre-Aryan race, non-white, and the human ancestors of the white or Caucasian man. [33]

Adamites were a very peaceful race, but Nodites were very adventurous and fighters, so their common descendants - the Andites – came to be sagacious militarists. Their most recent descendants traveled around the planet by land and by sea, and discovered the last remote continent on the globe. [33]

For ten thousand years, Andites were forming the best and most complete human strain that appeared on Urantia. They had both advanced cultures, Adamic and Nodite. The Andite race was formed by the higher types of Nodite and Adamic races, with a smaller percentage of the best strains of yellow, blue, and green men. [34]

9. EARTH MIXED RACES

15,000 years ago, the Adamic culture of Mesopotamia was slowly disappearing when its new renaissance began, thanks to the extensive union of Adamites and half-blood Nodites, resulting in a new wave of Andites from Mesopotamia.

At this time, the Sethite priesthood also inaugurated a new splendid era of its revival. Seth had a son, Enos, who was the first human to “go to heaven without passing through physical death.” [35, 36]

The new Andites of Mesopotamia began to migrate back to Europe, Asia, Africa, and China. They moved around the rest of the planet taking their teachings on religion, science, agriculture, commerce, art, construction, natural medicine, music, manufacturing, etc .

Consider the change of the population in different parts of the planet for thousands of years.

Iran, Turkestan. 15,000 years ago, Andites and a large group of Sethite priests from Mesopotamia migrated to Turkestan through the territory of Iran where Persian civilization flourished thereafter. The population of Turkestan was constantly renewed by the arrival of new Andites from Mesopotamia. There, Andites blended with Andonites and red and yellow men. The last Andites from Mesopotamia arrived in horses, so their movement was easier and much faster. [37]

In the highlands of Turkestan was forming a new language which derived many modern languages. This ancient language is called Indo-European or Aryan, and was a blend of the Andonic dialect with the language of the Adamsonites and Andites from Mesopotamia.

The 150 languages in Europe and Asia belong to the Indo-European language family. [38]

Indo-European languages
1. Albanian language	7. Slavic group
2. Armenian Language	8. Germanic group
3. Anatole group	9. Greek group
4. Balkan group	10. Indo-Iranian group
5. Baltic group	11. Italic Group - Latin languages
6. Celtic group

India. The only place where all races of Urantia blended was India. From the beginning it was a combination of red and yellow races with Andonites; this group weakened later to absorb large amounts of secondary Sangik races - green , orange, and indigo - and later Indian people was enhanced with a hint of blue man's blood .

By 20,000 BC, the population of western India had been tinged with Adamic blood, but unfortunately secondary Sangik strains predominated in the blood of all the people in India.

About 15,000 BC, Turkestan Andites entered India, conquering the entire peninsula. Andites established rigid restrictions on interracial marriage in order to preserve their race, but around the year 10,000 BC Andites had been absorbed by the native people in India.

This blending resulted in a new Dravidian people, which had a great capacity for cultural and spiritual achievements. Dravidians were the first people to build cities; they started the import and export trade both by land and by sea. [39]

In 16,000 BC, a company of one hundred Sethite priests from Mesopotamia entered India. The Sethite priesthood was an organization including religion, health, and education. Sethites taught monotheism, the truth of the one God and the doctrines on the Paradise Trinity, but their religion did not persist. In five thousand years, the concept of the Paradise Trinity became the triune symbol of the fire god. Brahmanism religion, now practiced in India, rose from Sethite priests, although their teachings differ greatly from those of their illustrious teachers.

By the year 8000 BC, camel trains were making regular trips from India to Mesopotamia and Dravidian shipping conquered the Arabian Sea, the Persian Gulf and came to the Sumerian cities, where the natives of India imported the alphabet and the art of writing. [40]

The second Andite penetration of India was the Aryan invasion of Turkestan, in the middle of the third millennium BC, and lasted five hundred years. Aryans made very little racial impression on India except in the northern provinces. The four castes were created by them and by the Sethite priests, in order to prevent racial amalgamation of the conquerors with Indian inferior races. [41]

China. The East Asian history is in general the story of the red man and the yellow man. These two races almost entirely avoided blending with the subhuman Neanderthal, who so greatly retarded the progress of the blue man in Europe. Red and yellow races are the only races in the planet that ever achieved a high degree of civilization far from the Andite influence. [42]

For more than 200,000 years, these two races were involved in a war with each other, until yellow men expelled red men back 85,000 years ago from East Asia to North America. But the long struggle with the red man left their genetic imprint upon the yellow race. Since 300,000 years ago the yellow race is settled in East Asia, in the area where China is now.

20,000 years ago, the ancestors of the Chinese had built a dozen centers of culture and teaching along the Yellow River and the Blue River. Later, they were strengthened by the arrival of superior blended people of northern China and Tibet. [43]

The superiority of the ancient yellow race was due to the following: Northern Chinese benefited with small amounts of red blood and later with red and Andonic blood, but southern Chinese were not as progressive, because they blended with the green man and later with inferior people who were crowded out of India. Today in China there is a definite difference between the northern and southern races.

In 15,000 BC, Chinese built a true nation of 12,000,000 people with a common language. At this time, Chinese were very spiritual, monotheistic and worshiped the One Truth; they were pacifists and learned the value of peace among themselves. [43]

Nearly 15,000 years ago, an infiltration of the Andites and Andonites began from the west to China. The racial amalgamation between Chinese and Andites produced a more versatile northern Chinese man. Later Andites brought with them other waves of cultural advances of Mesopotamia.

From year 10,000 BC on, after the last arrival of the Andites, Chinese started building cities. The Andite influence in the yellow race stimulated economy, education, arts, and Chinese traditions. Early Chinese legends place "the land of the gods" (Mesopotamia) in the west. At this time sciences, astronomy, and trade between China and Mesopotamia appeared. [44]

Indochina Peninsula, Pacific Islands, Japan. After expelling the red man from Asia , 85,000 years ago the ancient people of China and India were blended in the Indochina Peninsula and cultural combination subsequently produced new civilizations, which are now the nations of Burma, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Thailand, etc.

These people include the biggest quantity of green man's blood than any other people on the planet. [45]

80,000 years ago the 20,000 small islands of the Pacific, located in the south and grouped as islands of Polynesia, Micronesia, and Melanesia, were much larger and inhabited by people having high percentages of green and indigo blood .

The northern islands of the Pacific such as the Philippines, Marianas Islands, and Japan islands, were dominated by Andonites and, later on, by races embracing large proportions of the red and yellow stocks.

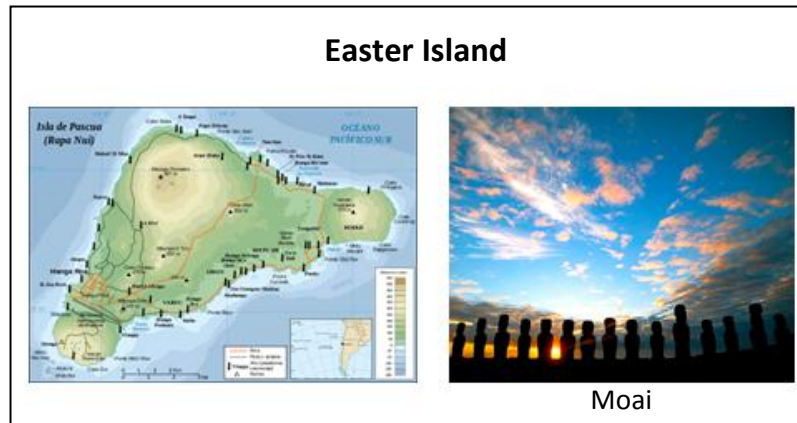

The ancestors of the Japanese people were driven off East Asia by the northern Chinese tribes in the year 12,000 BC. Its final exodus to the islands of the Pacific Ocean was due to the initiative of a chieftain whom the Japanese people came to regard as a divine personage. [45]

The year 12,000 BC, after their massive exodus from Mesopotamia, Andites moved to East Asia and a flotilla of small boats crossed the Pacific Ocean tarrying on the many islands they found along the way. These Andite sailors, together with some other racial groups who followed them in small boats, stayed in the islands of the Pacific Ocean blending with the native people and biologically modified them.

Andites developed many centers of civilization in these islands, the majority of them being now submerged. Easter Island, which belongs to the Polynesian group, lasted a very long time as the religious and administrative center of a group of islands now submerged.

In Easter Island, the Moai are gigantic statues which surprise modern scientists by their inexplicable appearance. [46]

America. 85,000 years ago, the eleven tribes of the red race totaling seven thousand men, women, and children, crossed the Bering Strait and settled in North America. Along with them came to this continent three tribes of half-blood men with a combination of orange, yellow, and blue race. [47]

Most of red tribes stayed in North America and never blended with other races. These men of North America were nomads and hunters, practiced agriculture to a lesser degree, and constantly fought each other.

Shortly after their arrival to North America, mixed tribes and some tribes of pure red men moved south to Mexico and Central America. All these people blended each other and founded a new amalgamated race which was much less warlike than the red men. Five thousand years later, this amalgamated race was divided into three groups, thus establishing the three civilizations of Mexico, Central and South America respectively. [47]

About 12,000 years ago, a fleet of small Andite boats left the islands of Japan and reached South America. They were only 132 Andite sailors who made it to South America. Andites mixed with Native American people and established the Mayan, Aztec, and Inca civilizations, among others.

They were the Andites who brought technologies of building, astronomy, and natural medicine to the American people; they also established dynasties of emperors of civilizations in the Americas. [48]

Africa, Egypt. Early Andonite people did not enter Africa at first, but later some tribes that used to mingle very freely with their animal cousins gradually migrated southward and westward from their homeland. [49] Approximately 800,000 years ago, the tribes of the early Neanderthal man reached northern Africa. [50]

300,000 years ago, the orange man was the first in the Sangik family to get to Africa. Then tribes of green men came and started a war between the two races. The final battle took place in the lower Nile valley, Egypt, it lasted nearly 100 years and in the end there were very little orange race people left. [51]

The last ones to come to Africa were the tribes of the indigo men (black), where they absorbed the remnants of the orange men and green men. Egypt was first dominated by the orange men, then the by green men, followed by the indigo men. [52]

The people of the Sahara were shepherds and farmers, because at this time Sahara was a fertile land. Saharans were a group consisting of an indigo group blended with the strains of the now extinct green and orange races. They had black hair, dark eyes, short height and long head. They manufactured no items and built no cities – it was an inferior race of the Egyptians. [53]

Long before the arrival of Adam on the planet (38,000 years ago), blue men and half-blood people from Arabia had driven the indigo race from Egypt to South Africa. [52]

In 30,000 BC, the Mediterranean Sea was separated from the Atlantic Ocean by the isthmus of Gibraltar, and Africa was connected to Europe by the Sicilian land bridge. For nearly three thousand years, the people from Mesopotamia and Nodites brought their culture, art, and science to Egypt. There was maritime trade, which made the blue men of the North and the people of Sahara and Egypt meet Eastern Adamites and Nodites.

15,000 years ago, the expansion of the Mesopotamia violet race was interrupted by certain climate changes worldwide. [53] [54]. Onshore winds and ocean streams changed their directions and the fertile land of Sahara turned into a desert. The Isthmus of Gibraltar gave way as the result of an earthquake and the Mediterranean Sea level rose rapidly to the level of the Atlantic Ocean. The Sicilian land bridge submerged and separated Africa from Italy. At the same time, England separated from the continent, Denmark arose from the sea, and the Caspian Sea expanded. [55]

At this time, the people of Sahara entered Egypt and this greatly deteriorated the ancient civilization along the Nile. Egypt reached its lowest cultural level. [56]

Between 8,000 and 6,000 BC, the wild tribes of the hills of the east and west forced Mesopotamian Andites to leave their land. The Euphrates valley residents took their final departure from Mesopotamia, and ten percent of these Andites crossed the Arabian Peninsula and entered Egypt. With the arrival of the latter Andites, the revival of Egyptian culture began. Andites formed the dynasties of the pharaohs of Egypt. [57]

Mesopotamia, Sumeria, Babylon. 500,000 years ago, the first city in the world was built near the Persian Gulf of those days, whose name was Dalamatia. This was the first cultural center, where the natives of the planet were taught. [58]

300,000 years ago, this beautiful city was destroyed and later submerged under the waters of the Persian Gulf. At this time the Nodite race occupied the Euphrates valley in Mesopotamia. [59]

About 36,000 years BC, in the northern part of Mesopotamia, the second Garden of Adam and Eve was established. It was the cradle of civilization for nearly 30,000 years. Here in the valley between the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, in the territory that is now part of Iraq, violet race people settled, which were superior to all the other races on the planet. When violet race men mingled with the natives of the planet, their descendants were extraordinary men. The violet race plasm immediately accelerated biological evolution of the human bodies of all races which were mixed with it. Besides, the large Adamic family contributed greatly to the social, intellectual and moral progress of the people on the planet.

For thousands of years, the Adamic race of the second garden kept its traditions and did not mix with other races, forming a pure violet race population. When overpopulation appeared, instead of making war, they sent out their people as teachers from Mesopotamia to the neighboring tribes.

Around 25,000 years BC, many of the most pure Adamites were migrating to Europe and Asia while blending with other races, with Nodites to a greater degree. As they moved north and east into Turkestan, they were becoming less and less Adamic. [60] At the end of their Adamic migration, about 15,000 years BC, there were more descendants of Adam in Europe and Central Asia than in Mesopotamia. The pure and amalgamated Adamic race disappeared entirely in Mesopotamia 2,000 years ago. [61] [62]

By the year 25,000 BC, the first people of a new Andite race appeared, a mixture of Nodites and Adamites. The second garden culture in Mesopotamia suffered a decline, but about 15,000 BC the second revival of the garden began as a result of extensive union of Adamites and half-blood Nodites, which gave rise to a new branch of the Andite race. This race built the best human strain that appeared on the planet after pure violet people. [63]

At this time, 15,000 years ago, Andites began a large-scale migration to Europe, Asia and North Africa. The massive waves of civilization that spread throughout Europe and Turkestan were the immediate result of the great renaissance of the second Garden of Mesopotamia. [63]

Between 8,000 and 6,000 BC, the final output of Mesopotamian Andites began, because the permanent attack of Mesopotamian backward tribes of the east and west. The inhabitants of the Euphrates valley began their final exodus in different directions to Europe via the Caspian Sea, entering Iran (Elam), Turkestan, China, and Egypt. [64]

Five percent of these Andites refused to leave their places and stayed in the lands near the mouth of the Tigris and Euphrates. This group of Andites never allowed marriage with the inferior neighboring tribes and had a superior culture of Mesopotamia. [64]

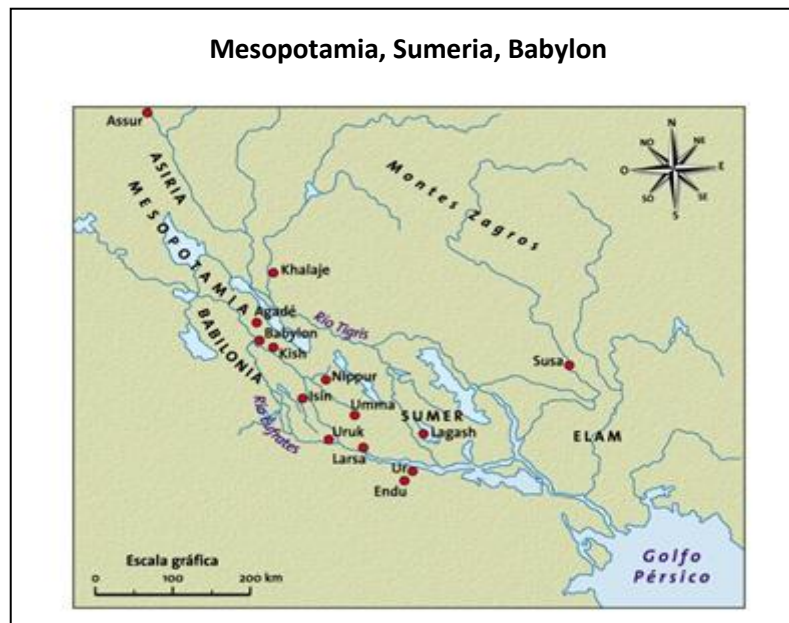

About 6,000 BC, these Andites established a new Sumerian civilization, which represented the last pure Andites left in Mesopotamia. The rest of the people of Mesopotamia were completely mixed with the inferior neighboring tribes. [65]

About 5,000 BC, new dangers threatened the Mesopotamian valley; floods through the Euphrates valley began as a result of geological and climatic changes. For nearly a thousand years, scores of cities were practically abandoned; the legend of Noah belongs to this time. [66]

Floods did not affect much the cities of Susa and Ur, because Sumerians made works that controlled floods and Ur became the center of the pottery industry. [67]

Sometime after floods, the less advanced but more vigorous tribes of Turkestan arrived on horse and quickly took over the entire Euphrates valley, but failed to conquer Sumerians. These conquerors had the best Andite blood blended with other Northern races of Turkestan; they even had a bit of the Adamson strain.

Conquerors quickly assimilated the culture of Mesopotamia and, by blending, Mesopotamian people adapted their culture, their arts, and even sought to build another tower of Babel and later they adapted the term as their national name - thus Babylon appeared. [66]

Invaders conquered the valley except Sumerians, who were able to defend themselves because of their superior intelligence, better weapons and their military system of military canals. At this time, cities were formed all over Mesopotamia - states which constantly fought each other.

By the year 2,500 BC, some Andonite lower tribes arrived in Mesopotamia and destroyed the Sumerian capital, Lagash. This was the most serious and lasting of all cultural setbacks up to that time. All the people of Mesopotamia changed and andonized. [68]

Sumerians were absorbed into the population of northern Semites. Thus the last Mesopotamian Andites disappeared from the pages of history.

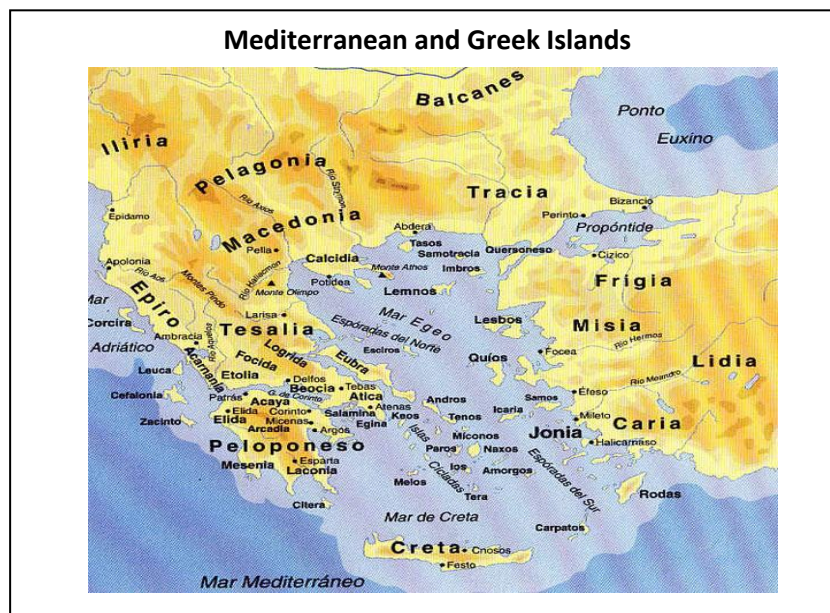

Subsequent climatic changes ruined the fertile lands of Mesopotamia, making them a desert. [69]

Mediterranean and Greek Islands. Around 12,000 BC, a brilliant tribe of Mesopotamian Andites migrated to Crete and almost 2,000 years after, their mariners descendants spread to the neighboring islands. These were the narrow-headed, smaller-statured Andites that intermarried with the Vanite division of the northern Nodites. At that time, in Crete, Iran, and Asia Minor (Turkey), the mother cult brought by the descendants of Cain flourished. This cult glorified Eve in thousands of temples built to worship the "Great Mother ".

The mother cult persisted until the times of Christ and later incorporated under the glorification and worship of Mary, the earth mother of Jesus of Nazareth. [70]

10,000 years ago, a group of descendants of Adamson, Adam's first son, came from Turkestan and settled in Greece. They were three hundred and seventy-five men and women, with a high intellectual level and, physically regarded, the most beautiful of men since the days of the first Eden. These progenitors of the Greeks were led to western Europe by Sato, a direct descendant of Adamson and Ratta. That is the reason why the Greeks had mythologies that traced their origin directly from the gods and superhuman beings. [70]

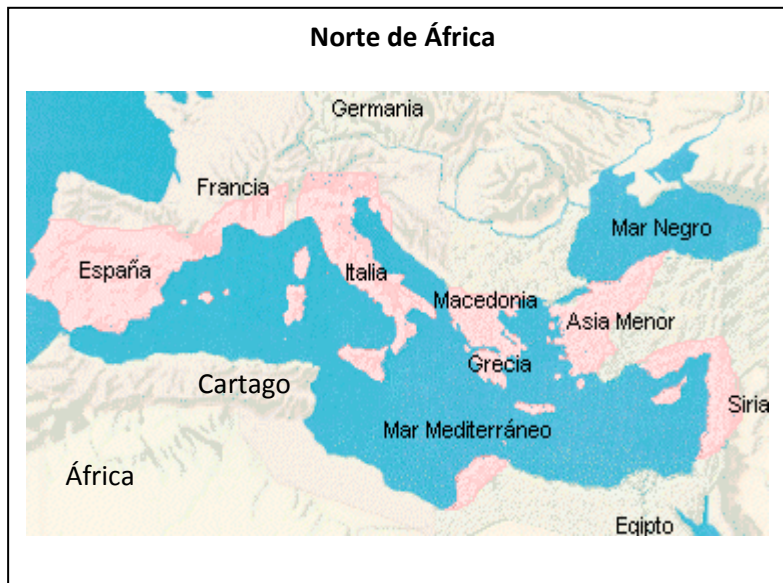

Around 5,000 BC, at the time of the decline of Mesopotamia, many progressive Andites moved out of the Euphrates valley and settled upon the island of Cyprus. This civilization was wiped out by the barbarian hordes from the north after two thousand years of existence. [71]

The Aegean region also passed through five major stages of cultural development, this Andite civilization migrated later to Italy from the islands and coasts of the Aegean. [72]

A great colony of Andites migrated to north Africa, near the future city of Carthage and from there Andites migrated to area between Spain and Switzerland. Finally

Mesopotamian culture moved to Greece, to the Aegean Islands and Mediterranean Sea and northern Europe. [70]

Europe. Since almost 1,000,000 years ago, the first human Andonic race started migrating north from the mountains of Asia. 900,000 years ago, Andonites were distributed all over Europe and came to England. The subrace Neanderthal, the blend of Andonite humans with their animal cousins, appeared 800,000 years ago and quickly spread throughout Europe. [73]

Neanderthals were permanently degrading themselves, but at this time there were also other tribes in Europe such as Foxhall and Heidelberg people, who were in the territories of France, Belgium, and Germany. [74]

300,000 years ago, many blue men from the Sangik family began moving to Europe from their home in the mountains of southern Asia. With them, other few tribes of red and yellow men were traveling to the north of the planet, where they blended together.

35,000 years ago, European blue races were already highly blended. Their former home centers were located along all the rivers of Europe. At this time, Cro-Magnon people lived in Europe, consisting at blue men blended with other races living in Europe since pre-Adamic times. Cro-Magnon is the name of the cave in France where their fossils were found. Cro-Magnons were a brave and farseeing race; they were hunters, fishermen, and boat and cabin builders. Southern European Cro-Magnons generally lived in caves and grottoes. Cro-Magnon man was the biological basis of European white races. [75]

21,000 years ago, the purest Adamites of the second Garden of Mesopotamia began to move northward, mingling with the Nodites and the blue men living in Europe. [76]

European Population

- 900,000 years - Andonite.
- 300,000 years - blue man, to a less extent red men and yellow.
- Before 35,000 years - Cro-Magnon - mixed blue man.
- 21,000 years B.C. - Arrival of the Adamites.
- 15,000 years B.C. - Andites conquer Europe
- 8000-6000 years B.C. - Arrival of new the Andites.

Between 8,000 and 6,000 BC, there were seven Andites invasions from Mesopotamia to Europe, and last Andites came on horseback and quickly blended with the European tribes. [77]

Although the European blue man did not achieve a cultural civilization, their blending with the Adamic blood and later with Andite strains produced a very powerful white race with a more talented civilization than any other on Urantia since the times of the violet race and their Andite successors in Mesopotamia. The Modern white races incorporate various old strains: blue, violet (Adamic), Andite, red, yellow, Andonite, and Nodite. [78]

10 . WHITE RACE

The white race was formed by the blending of different races and containing different percentages of greater or lesser degree of blue, Adamic, Andite, Nod, red, yellow, and Andonite blood.

About 3,000 BC, racial blending in Europe can be classified in three white races as follows:

1. Northern white race. It consisted primarily of the blue man plus the Andite, and Andonite, red and yellow blood in a lesser degree. The typical early Nordic was long-headed; they were tall, blonde with blue eyes. But long ago this race became mixed with other branches of the white man. Nordic whites never built homes and lived in caves; they practiced mother worship and performed the ceremony of cremation of the dead. This is why the remains of the first white men in Scandinavia cannot be found, only their ashes in stone or clay urns can be found. This explains why there are so few evidences of the white man's early culture and why there is a considerable evidence of the previous early man, Cro-Magnon man, whose fossils were found in caves in Europe. [79]
2. Central white race. From the year 3,000 BC on, many tribes of Turkestan Andonites began migrating to Central Europe through the shores of the Caspian Sea and Black Sea and penetrated Europe through both the Balkans and the Ukraine. Later, a large number of Iranian Andites, descendants of Adamson and Sethite priests, also invaded central Europe. Andonites mixed with Andites, blue, and yellow men and so formed the Central white race. These people are broad-headed and stocky.

By the year 2,500 BC, a large quantity of Andonite barbarians from Turkestan flooded throughout Mesopotamia, Asia Minor (Turkey), and the Danube river basin. These invaders Andonized the central Europe races and as a result they constituted the most serious and lasting of all cultural setbacks up to that time. [80]
3. Southern white race. This white race is the most blended of all. By the year 2,500 BC, blue men with Andite and in a lesser degree with an Andonite strain were mixed in southern Europe. Later, this group has undergone further admixture with the blue-yellow-Andite people of Arabia. Men of this white race living on the shores of the Mediterranean basin are short, long-headed, and brunet.

The relatively pure blue race in our time is represented by the Basques in Spain and the Berbers of North Africa (Algeria, Morocco, Tunisia, etc.)

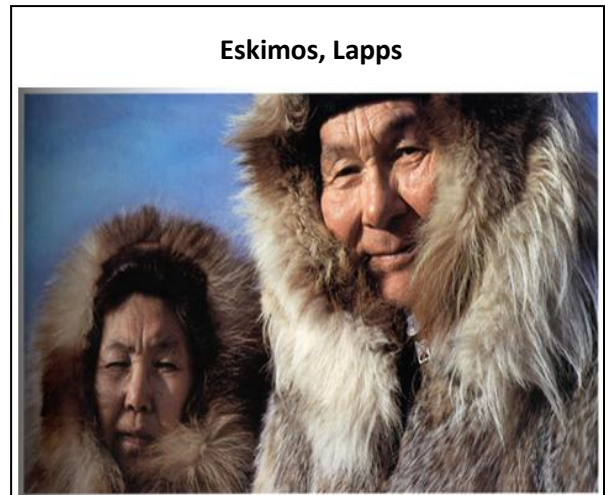

That was the picture of race mixture in Europe in the third millennium BC. Despite the partial Adamic default, the mix of superior races gave its outcome. Over the last three millenniums there was too much mixing among all races, this is the reason why races cannot be clearly grouped at all. [80]

Twenty-first century modern man appeared as a result of a wide blend of nine major racial groups. Each ethnic group is different because modern man has received different amounts of blood from the primary races.

For example, the Eskimos and the Lapps (Nordic people living near the Arctic Ocean and occupying provinces of Norway , Sweden , Finland, and Russia) are a mixture of Andonite and Sangik-blue man in a lesser degree.

But the Adamites and the Nodites have become so admixed with other Sangik and Andonic races that one can only speak of a generalized Caucasian-white race.

Now it is impossible to clearly distinguish the nine original races. The study on the skeletal structures of modern men now reveals that humanity can be divided into approximately three classes:

1. Caucasoid - Andite blend (Adamic and Nodite stocks) modified by primary Sangik blood (blue, yellow, and red), and in a lesser degree by secondary Sangik blood, also with significant Andonic blood. This group includes Occidental white races, together with some Indian and Turanian people (Turkey, Iran, and Turkestan). The unifying factor in this division is the greater or lesser proportion of Andite inheritance.

2. Mongoloid - primary Sangik blood (red, yellow, blue). Chinese and Amerindians (Native American) belong to this group. Malayan and Indonesian people also contain a high percentage of secondary Sangik blood (orange, green, and indigo) plus an Andite and Andonic mixture.
3. Negroid - secondary Sangik type (indigo, green, and orange) is found in Africa, India, and Indonesia.

To determine racial differences between modern humans is better to analyze skeletal characteristics, not only the skull, because there are still differences between these three types of human races today. [81]

Contemporary scientists divide mankind into three classes, as was predicted cone in the twenties of the last century in The Urantia Book. [82]
